

Stopping Methotrexate when in hospital

Information for patients, relatives and carers

What will happen on admission?

When you are admitted to our hospital, we will usually stop your Methotrexate tablets or injections for a short time. If you have brought your methotrexate with you to hospital, the nurse will ask you if someone can take it back to your home.

Why do we do this?

Methotrexate is an excellent medicine to treat inflammation, but it may delay the recovery from some illnesses, particularly infections.

Will my specialist and GP know? Yes. All doctors have been informed about this policy

Will the condition I need Methotrexate for be made worse by stopping it? No, it is alright to stop Methotrexate temporarily.

What happens if I need to be in hospital for a long period?

The team of doctors looking after you will ask your specialists to review your case and decide if your Methotrexate can be restarted.

When I go home when should I restart my Methotrexate?

Your discharge paperwork should advise you when to restart Methotrexate. However, if you are still recovering from an illness or surgery or you are not sure what to do, you should check with your GP or your specialist team.

What dose of methotrexate should I restart on?

You can restart at your usual dose unless you have been told to do something different by your specialist team or your GP. They may want you to have some extra blood tests after you have restarted.

What about my folic acid tablets? There is no need to stop these.

Who can tell me more about this? The ward pharmacist and your medical team can give you more information while you are in hospital. Alternatively, you could contact your Specialist Team.
