What is Patient-Initiated Follow-Up (PIFU)?

Many patients with long-term health conditions such as Irritable Bowel Syndrome (IBS) do not need regular follow-up appointments with their hospital team if their condition is stable. This is because research has shown that regular clinic visits do not prevent the condition from returning. Instead, it is more important that patients can access care when they need it, and this is the purpose of patient-initiated follow-up (PIFU). Rather than being offered regular clinic appointments with a specialist nurse at fixed time points, PIFU patients can make their own appointment when required, for example if they have severe symptoms.

What are the potential benefits of PIFU?

PIFU puts patients in control of their own care and provides direct access to the hospital team when needed. This is often more convenient for patients and reduces unnecessary travel to the hospital and time spent waiting in clinic for routine follow-up appointments.

Are all patients with IBS suitable for PIFU?

No. For now, only patients awaiting gut directed hypnotherapy are eligible for PIFU.

How does PIFU work?

During your next clinic appointment or telephone review, the specialist nurse will review your condition, your symptoms, and your treatment. They will discuss whether you could be suitable for PIFU rather than regular scheduled hospital appointments. Managing your appointments via PIFU is optional and it is your decision. The information provided in this leaflet is designed to help you to make this choice.

If you decide to manage your appointments using PIFU you will also be provided with a PIFU card. This provides the contact details for the PIFU team which are also available in this leaflet. We will write to your GP to explain that you will be managing your appointments using PIFU.

How do I book a PIFU appointment?

The service is quick and easy to use. If you experience a severe flare with your condition, simply call the PIFU team using the contact details provided on your PIFU card and in this leaflet. These are the usual IBS office numbers.

Explain to the team that you are experiencing problems and an IBS specialist nurse will get in touch to discuss this with you. If necessary, an appointment will be arranged for you to see a specialist nurse. This will be within the next 28 days but is likely to be sooner than this. Alternatively, it may be possible to resolve the problem over the telephone.

Please remember that if an appointment is arranged for you it is very important that you attend. If you find that you are no longer available and need to rearrange your appointment, please tell us in advance so that we can give your appointment to someone else who needs it.

When should I arrange a PIFU appointment?

You should call the PIFU team if you are experiencing a severe flare of your IBS.

What will happen following my PIFU appointment?

Following your appointment, the specialist nurse will discuss with you whether to remain under PIFU or whether to go back to regular appointments.

When is it not appropriate to contact PIFU?

If you require urgent medical advice you should either contact your GP, or call NHS 111. If you are really unwell, you should attend your local Emergency Department (A&E). For all other medical concerns, your GP remains your first point of contact.

Will the hospital still be looking after me even if I do not need to contact the PIFU team?

Yes. We will contact you to arrange a gut directed hypnotherapy appointment if you have not contacted the PIFU team after a fixed period. This will be a period of three years. Your specialist nurse will agree this timescale with you depending on the details of your condition.

What if I have concerns and change my mind about PIFU?

Even though many patients appreciate the flexibility offered by PIFU, some patients may become worried about no longer having regular contact with the hospital. If you wish to go back to booking regular hospital appointments just let us know and this can be arranged.
